

FARMERS OPPOSE CHAIN STORE TAX AT PUBLIC HEARING

Big Merchandisers Provide An Outlet for Crops, Spokesman Tells Senate Committee

WILL CREATE IDLENESS Predict a Number of Small Stores Will Be Closed As Result of Tax

By Frederick N. Polanin
HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—(INS)—Determined to steam-roller the administration chain store tax measure through to final passage, the Democratic-controlled legislature today awaited the introduction of the long-delayed final phase of Gov. George H. Earle's "mandate" program—relief and public assistance.

The relief and public assistance program, modeled after the Goodrich recommendations, has been completed and will consist of seven measures. Whether or not it will be introduced today, however, was a matter of conjecture.

Opponents and proponents of the controversial chain-store tax measures, expected to yield some $3,000,000 during the next two years, aired their views at a Senate public hearing last night. Despite the vigorous opposition to the measure, however, observers were confident the Senate would accede to the Governor's demands and pass it promptly. It already has been approved by the House.

Revenue derived from the chain-store levy would be diverted to raising the salary standards of teachers of fourth class school districts, now getting $800 annually. The salaries would be raised to a minimum of $1,000 a year.

"We all know the present problem of unemployment," declared William H. Eden, representative of the American Stores Company. "This act will increase unemployment because it will force chain stores to close many of their smaller units; raise the cost of living because prices will be advanced to pay the cost of the tax in other stores; create a dangerous precedent for future class legislation; cost the citizens of Pennsylvania far more than the State can hope to receive in taxes; handicap the farmers in their marketing facilities; and create chaos in the whole food industry because it will force the chains to open large self-served super-markets and in some instances cause them to operate wholesale grocery units."

"The Governor stated over the radio last Saturday evening that this was not an ideal tax, that it was based on ability to pay and that it was not a sales tax," he continued. "We agree that this is far from an ideal tax. To prove that fact, you have only to look at the sugar-coating given it by an amendment made after the third reading in the House, earmarking the receipts of the tax to pay for an increase in the salaries of fourth class school teachers."

He referred to the Horting companion measure, appropriating the proceeds of the chain store tax to the fourth class districts. The Horting bill was approved by the House yesterday and was sent to the Senate.

Spokesmen for co-operative farm groups said the proposed chain store tax would reduce their market and increase the cost of living.

The farm representatives said the chain stores provide a steady market for their products and can quickly absorb surplus crops in emergencies.

George A. Boyer, Lehigh Valley Farms, a co-operative organization, said the two large chain store companies in Allentown were taking the milk which the Hershey Chocolate Corporation was unable to buy over the week-end because of the sit-down strike at the plant.

Eden denied that chain stores "take everything out of town and give nothing in return."

He said about 75¢ cents of every dollar goes to pay for merchandise and 18½¢ for wages, rents, advertising, taxes, light, heat, insurance, etc.

"Practically all this money is spent locally," Eden said. "This leaves less than two cents on each dollar of sales for net profit."

He said 47 percent of the food consumed in Pennsylvania is sold by 43 chain companies operating 5264 stores.

Francis Biddle, Philadelphia attorney, presented 17 speakers opposing the bill, including farmers, dairymen, cattlemen and chain store spokesmen. Biddle said the Atlantic and Pacific Company has 2993 stores in Pennsylvania and the American Stores Company 1773 stores.

A tax of $500 a store would be imposed on each store over 500 in number. A tax of $1 would be levied on a single store. The tax would be increased.

The bill passed the House and is now in Senate committee.

Funds raised by the bill would be used to provide a $1000 minimum salary for teachers in fourth class districts.

PIEO FINISHES FIRST IN "GYM" COMPETITION

Bristol High Student Makes Wonderful Showing at Germantown Boys' Club

SCORES 923-PT. TOTAL

Roman Pico, Bristol high school "gym" star, came out first in the all-around gymnastic competition on the rings, high bar and parallel bars, last evening, at the Germantown Boys' Club.

Pico's performance is regarded as most remarkable, especially in view of the fact that college students were included as well as those from high schools and clubs.

Each contestant was required to participate on each piece, namely the rings, high bar and parallel bars.

Pico secured 25 points in advance of his next nearest competitor, N. Gorman, of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde. Pico's total was 923, and for Gorman 898.

Pico was trailing as he finished his work on the high bar and parallel bars. But when he completed his still and flying figures on the rings, his total lead over Gorman on the rings, his total points advanced him far ahead of the second place winner. Third place was gained by J. Lowell, of the Germantown Boys' Club.

Points gained in various competitions are as follows:

	Rings	Bar	Bars	Total
R. Pico	447	239	237	923
N. Gorman	392	262	244	898

Doylestown Business Men To Close Stores On Wednesday

DOYLESTOWN, April 7.—Business men here have organized and have decided to close their stores on Wednesday afternoons.

The merchants also decided upon uniform Christmas decorations for business places. Members will pay at least $1 per month into the Christmas fund, with some of the stores with larger business fronts paying more.

SATURDAY MARKS END OF BIG VOTE VALUE; "KNOCKOUT" GIVEN DEPRESSION

Baby election workers please take notice that Saturday is the LAST day upon which the vote coupons issued by the co-operating merchants and subscription payments to The Bristol Courier will be credited with FOUR-for-one CREDITS. The coupons issued by the merchants may be deposited in the ballot box placed at headquarters for that purpose as usual until then, and FOUR credits will be given them.

Tabulations of the coupons placed in the ballot box will be made early Monday morning, as usual, and all coupons will be recognized in the FOUR-for-one CREDITS. Subscription payments, however, must be brought to the election office or mailed in with remittance by Saturday night. So long as the letter bears the postmark of not later than Saturday, April 10th, subscriptions will be applied upon the FOUR-FOR-ONE VOTE COUNT even though they are not received until later.

Who couldn't get out and take the depression by the horns for a bright-eyed youngster, maybe your own, but perhaps only the bright spot in another home near you, or maybe one in a distant section of the community?

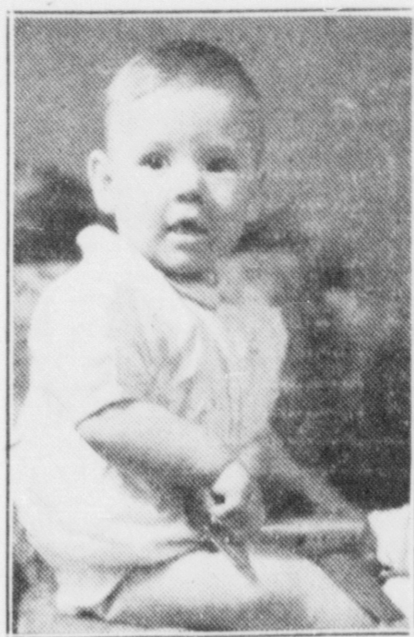

And merchants say that depression is folding up before the onslaughts of the baby campaigners. Votes, votes, votes—all the votes one needs to win this election, are in the hands of the merchants, who give them to you IF YOU ASK FOR THEM, but they are free with every purchase of 50 cents or more. The merchant knows instantly that you are alive and interested in selecting the favorite baby if you ask for the coupons. If you don't he may find it difficult to understand why you have failed to catch the contagion of the "Shower of Cash" election, now less than three weeks away.

Did you ever see a baby suffering from depression?

Of course you never did and you never will. They're not constructed that way, bless their happy souls, and they even make it difficult for others to feel blue when around them.

And that's perhaps the best reason for the sustained keen interest in the effort of The Bristol Courier and the community's enterprising merchants to select the favorite baby from out of several scores either already in the "Small but mighty" could well be applied to this young Bristol citizen, because he holds third place on this week's Honor Roll, in spite of the stiff competition now marking the Baby election, and you have only to look at his animated face to know that he will be among the leaders. Lindberghs Missing Again

London, April 7.—Once again, as on so many occasions before, the whereabouts of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh have all sections of the world wondering today, as the hour of their arrival from Vagreb, Yugoslavia, is past.

The Lindberghs, as usual, made no announcement of their projected destination when they left the Yugoslavian city. There were reports about that they planned to fly direct to London. But as the hour when they normally would have arrived safely from such a flight was past, there was still no word of them.

Every airport in England was checked, and contacts made with every known landing field in Yugoslavia, Austria, Hungary, and Germany, all without success.

Bucks County Legislators Are Active in Both the House And the Senate

INTRODUCE RIPPER BILL

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—A "ripper" bill which would remove from office the members of the Bucks County Poor Board, was introduced in the Senate this week by Sen. Glen C. Law, Mercer County Democrat.

Designed to repeal the law of 1897 entitled, "An act to provide for the erection of a house of employment and support of the poor in the County of Bucks," the measure would:

Provide for the county commissioners of Bucks County to be the ex-officio directors of the poor in the Bucks County poor district, to have and possess all the powers and perform all the duties vested in and imposed upon the directors of the poor of said county.

Terminate the terms of the directors of the poor now holding office in Bucks County on the first Monday of January, 1938.

Observers believed the bill was originally intended for introduction in the House of Representatives but was delayed until the expiration of the time limit on lower chamber measures.

Since there is no limit on the introduction of Senate measures, members of the House often have their friends in the Senate introduce late bills for them.

HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—(INS)—

First bill to pass final reading of the Senate this week was Senate Bill No. 1, introduced the first week of the current session by Republican floor leader Sen. Clarence J. Buckman, Bucks County.

The measure, which would provide for payment by the Commonwealth for land or property taken or damaged in the process of relocating state highways in counties which did not agree to such changes, was reported out of committee late last week to the surprise of observers who had predicted it would never see the light of another legislative day.

The proposal was given first and second reading in the upper chamber a month ago but was shipped back into the recesses of the Highways committee when an administration spokesman said the administration expected to introduce a similar measure.

Party line voting on the teachers' tenure was thrown to the wind at least among the Bucks-Montgomery House members. Of the 21 representatives.

With the opening of the baseball season, it is natural to see laudatory comments regarding the sport of sports. Annual eulogies about the part which the diamond game plays in the development of American manhood, the inculcation of ethical qualities and the dissemination of basic principles of citizenship are heralds which the public has come to anticipate.

As for ourselves, we prefer to turn away from all such idealistic twaddle and simply observe that baseball is a grand old game. Entirely apart from their possible civic and moral significance, the crack of the bat, the mad slide into second and the sensational one-handed spear are essential features of the American scene which add to the joy of millions.

No other justification is needed. It is enough to say that baseball occupies a big place in the heart of America, that it contains all the elements of a magnificent pastime and that it is full of thrills. With this observation, we leave all high-brow analysis to the seasonal scholars and merely add in passing that there's a potent kick in the current cry, "Play Ball!"

TOWNSEND, OPTIMIST

Dr. Townsend would like to have his followers lend him five million dollars. Each lender will get a 4 per cent promissory note, payable in two years. Offered as security are Dr. Townsend's total assets of $500 and his unsecured note.

As a business transaction this is just about as sound as is the Town- send plan itself. Even Dr. Town- send himself considers it an "extra- ordinary proposal." So was the Townsend plan. But the plan went big until it came to the test of the ballot box and then it fell to pieces. Maybe something of the same thing will happen to this latest proposal.

There is one commendable thing about Dr. Townsend: he is an opti- mist of first water. He declares that he is going to put his plan over "by arousing America to its needs." The doctor forgets that it is a great deal more difficult to arouse the people the second time than it is the first time. The complete failure that intervenes is an obstacle which may well dismay even a complete optimist.

CANADA'S INVITATION

Our Canadian neighbors are watching with interest the industrial turmoil in the United States and weighing the possibility that Ameri- ca's misfortune may prove a Cana- dian advantage.

They are hoping that American branch factories in Canada will step up production and that more Ameri- can industries will find it good policy to establish Canadian plants.

To encourage such developments they point to industrial peace in their country brought about by ade- quate laws and law enforcement. Premier Mitchell Hepburn, of Onta- rio, said recently: "We don't need injunctions to take care of sit-down strikes in Ontario. They are abso- lutely prohibited by the law and I intend to enforce it."

So many proposed laws this year read as if they had been written by that fellow who would have pre- ferred to write the nation's songs.

After years of quiet research we have about concluded that no decent omelet was ever made by a cook who was doing something else.

"Rich Cargoes" by Henry C. Rowland

SYNOPSIS

Aboard ship, returning from Yokohama, Allesandro (Sandy) Crewe, wealthy young scientist, in- advertently offends elderly and eccentric Colonel Carlton, by de- clining his invitation to visit him at his Bahama Island estate. Sandy regrets his decision when he sees a picture of the old man's niece, Isobel, but the Colonel will not re-invoke him. Undaunted, Sandy arrives in the Bahamas two months later with an elephant as a peace offering for the Colonel. Elephants have always been a weakness with the Colonel; he once mentioned to Sandy that he preferred them for travel instead of automobiles. Sandy finds Isobel even more attrac- tive than her picture. Giving Sandy a veiled look, she says, "I think you are more dangerous than I could ever have believed and like your outrageous present." Docile, benevolent, apt to be loyal, steadfast and affectionate? asks Sandy. "No!" the girl replies. "An elephant on our hands!"

CHAPTER VII

If one millionaire sees fit to give another millionaire the gift of an elephant, the reasonableness of the gift is merely a matter of geography. Scarcely that, in fact, but rather of expedi- ency. Some years ago it would have been as much in order for Mr. Barnum to present Mr. Forepaugh with an elephant of his herd as for the Rajah of Lahore to make the same present to a fellow potentate.

In the present case, when one stopped to think, the token of es- teem, or bribe or price of hospitali- ty was no less sane. Colonel Car- ton could do well with Mouse. The large island with its abundance of fodder for the animal could use this sort of animated and highly intelli- gent tractor. There was heavy hauling and building to be done, bush and jungle to be cleared, boats to be beached, no lack of ele- phantine labor.

But it is doubtful if these bene- fits entered the Colonel's head. His soul had craved a pad elephant. He wanted one to ride upon. His doctor had forbid the saddle, roads were rough or lacking, and the do- main a large one. Mouse was per- fect to get about upon. Also the Colonel craved such a responsive and affectionate pet. Like many men whose best years have been as- sociated with some sort of particu- lar necessity of occupation, horses, camels, boats or dog sleds, and whose declining years find in such an active and pleasant linking with past high endeavor, the Colonel had in his Oriental service of expert mining engineer and mineralogist been entirely dependent on ele- phants. He had grown to under- stand, which is to love them. And as is bound to happen, they loved him in return.

The rapport, entente cordiale, sympathy and general esteem be- tween the Colonel and Mouse was immediate. Even Mike, the train- er, was impressed. It was a prod- igy, though Mike did not use that word. His own was "hell-beater."

There was that night at dinner a very clear expression on Sandy's part of the motive that had prompt- ed his gift, its labor and expense. "Don't you two think for a moment that I counted on paying my foot- ing here. My search for that ani- mal was merely the price of a careless diplomatic error."

Colonel Carlton nodded. "Your declining my carefully weighed in- vitation to be my guest here for as long as you wanted to stay."

"Precisely. Even then I shouldn't have presumed to come if you hadn't let me off with a penalty for lese majeste. All this elephant has done is to wipe out my error and put me back where I was after your invitation and before my declining it. So it isn't a present at all. Merely the payment of a lost bet."

"I don't think it's even that," Isobel said.

"Why not?"

"Because as I understand it, you declined Uncle's invitation under the impression that all he had to offer was a Bahaman island and himself. You would have stood pat on that. Then you saw my picture and changed your mind. You were sorry and you said so to Uncle, but that wasn't enough, so you said it with elephants and goats and Irish- men and things."

"Well, what of it?" Sandy dea hip-lock. Who said a woman has no logic. As the case stands, you are Isobel's uninvited guest."

"I beg your pardon," Sandy said, "but permit me to say that I am nobody's guest at all. I am not here to pay you a visit but merely to make a formal call of apology and to express my regret with what seems a proper and fitting symbol."

"In that case," Isobel said, "I re- tract my claim to being your hos- tess."

Sandy turned slowly in his chair and gave her a level look. His eyes held the thoughtful interest they might have shown if contesting some technical point with a rival chemist, or for that matter a rival business man. "You could not logi- cally become my hostess," he said, "until I am given the entree of this house. And I could not bring you gifts of any value with correct form

The Colonel laughed. "There now she's got you."

manded. "Your uncle mentioned that in the case of a Rajah gifts would be in order, to save the royal hurt. He had dropped with no ul- terior motive a hint of what he most wanted, so I procured that thing. As you aptly remark, I said it with an elephant."

"True. But not to me," Isobel murmured.

"Why to you? Some day I hope to say it to you with that cargo of diamonds, emeralds, amethysts, topaz and cinnamon and gold moi- stures you were singing about when the barge barged in. But that day has not yet come. Your uncle is host here."

"True again. But you did not come to see him. As you have your- self admitted, you came to see me. And since I am under his orders to make his home my own, then I am your hostess and the only person you are visiting at all."

The Colonel laughed. "There now, she's got you. Half nelson and until Colonel Carlton has given me permission to pay you my addresses as a suitor for your hand in mar- riage."

Isobel appeared to consider San- dy's statement precisely as it had been made, with a level-minded thoughtfulness.

"You are quite right," she ad- mitted. "I spoke too hastily. Then as our mutual attitude now stands, there isn't any at all."

"No more," Sandy said, "than if I had called to wish your uncle 'happy New Year' and left him a box of cigars because I thought he had reason to be huffed with me. That is where we now stand. I have merely been presented to you be- cause you happened to be at home. Taking this position as a point of fresh departure, I shall now try to change all that."

BENSALEM NINE WINS OPENING GAME; SCORE, 7-5

By Bob MacFarland
Bensalem H. S. Press Representative
CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 7.—Bensalem High Owls opened their 1937 diamond campaign by taking a 7-5 decision over the Upper Moreland nine in a game played on a muddy field at Willow Grove yesterday.

Coach George Reimer started Joe Cahill on the mound, and he gave up only three runs in the four frames he pitched. The veteran, Hal Robinson, finished the game and was nicked for two runs. Wally Oppman, Cruise Crossley and Jim Kelly led the Owls with the stick with three hits each. The Owls had to rally for five runs in the last two innings to cap the decision. Bensalem will open their home season on Friday by playing Jim Doherty's Fallington nine.

TIME AND TROUBLE SAVERS

Fitting That Belt

When that suede or leather belt needs an extra hole to make it fit better, don't make a ragged incision that looks like an amateur job. Heat a steel knitting needle, or even a heavy darning needle and pierce the leather with that. Lay the belt on the bread board to further simplify the job.

Right Baking

Do not shake your measuring cup

after spooning in the sifted flour. Shaking packs the flour and means that you will use more than the recipe calls for.

Reheating Rolls

Place cold rolls in a paper bag. Fold bag tightly shut, dampen slightly with a dash of water and put into a hot oven for about five minutes. The rolls will seem freshly-baked.

Fried Eggs

Don't speed the egg frying process. Fried eggs will be tender and far more digestible if fried slowly. Also they will not sputter or snap.

Report Decrease of Those On Relief In The County

During the last week in March the total number of families carried on the direct relief rolls in Bucks County dropped from 511 to 496 cases. This represented a net weekly drop of 15 cases, and thus extended the downward trend which became apparent three weeks ago.

A summary of all the weekly changes in the relief rolls which occurred during March, showed that there was a total net reduction of 38 cases from the number carried on the rolls at the beginning of the month. As contrasted with this, it may be noted that during the previous two months increases had been observed in the rolls, i. e., an increase of 95 cases in January, and 77 cases during February. This reversal of the case-load trend which occurred during March, may be attributed almost entirely to the marked drop in the number of cases added to the relief rolls, both new and reopened. This number declined from 161 and 143 openings in January and February respectively, to only 89 approvals recorded during March. At the same time, it was also shown that there was a rather notable gain in the number of cases closed for relief during March as compared with the number of closings during the previous two months, amounting to 127 in March, as contrasted with 66 for January and February.

During the first three months of this year, there have been no significant changes in the number per case or in expenditures, past three months there were 3.9 per cent, and an average weekly expenditure of cant monthly changes in the number per person. Thus, during each of the months per each relief case on the rolls, $2.15 per person.

Representatives who cast negative ballots for the measure Reps. Lambert Cadwalader, Montgomery Republican, and Thomas Stockham, Bucks Republican, were the only two from the B-M territory.

Passed finally in the House of Representatives this week was the proposal of Rep. John H. Longaker, Montgomery Republican, to regulate the election of justices of the peace in consolidated boroughs. Longaker's bill which went through the lower chamber without a dissenting vote, was motivated according to its sponsor by a condition existing in the boroughs of Telford and W. Telford, recently consolidated. There two justices of the peace would be elected from one county while two counties Bucks and Montgomery are represented in the political sub-division under the new bill, one justice of the peace would be elected from each county.

Only measure to be reported out of committee in the lower chamber Monday night was a bill to limit the expenditure of revenue derived from borough-owned water works. The bill, which received automatic first reading by virtue of its emergency from the boroughs committee, was introduced by Rep. Thomas Stockham, Bucks County Republican.
